Cookie Policy

Effective Date: September 2026 | Last Reviewed: September 2026

1. What are cookies

Cookies are created when your browser loads this website (the "Service"). The Service sends information which is saved in a small text file, known as a cookie. Cookies may last for the duration of a browsing session or for a longer period.

2. How we use cookies

We may use cookies to support essential website functions, remember preferences, understand anonymous website usage and improve the Service.

- recognising that you may already have given a username and password for this Service;
- recording anonymous information about use of the Service to help maintain performance;
- analysing how people use and interact with the Service; and
- remembering your cookie-policy preference.

3. How to manage cookies

You can delete cookies or instruct your browser to delete or refuse them through its privacy settings. Refusing cookies may affect some features of the Service.

4. What cookies do we use?

Cookie	Purpose	Expiry
ASP.NET_SessionId	Enables the server to recognise the user during the current browser session.	End of session
_acceptCookie18	Records that the user has accepted the cookie policy so it is not shown again.	1 year
lang	If a Twitter/X feed is displayed, may remember the selected language.	End of session
_ga	Where Google Analytics is used, records statistical information about Service usage.	2 years
_gat / _gid	Where Google Analytics is used, records statistical information about Service usage.	Provider dependent
_stid	Where a third-party sharing control is enabled, may recognise the browser for return visits.	1 year

5. Third-party services

The website may contain embedded or linked third-party services, including social media, Google services, mapping services and other external content. These providers may use their own cookies and their own privacy and cookie policies apply.

6. Cookie consent

Where consent is required for non-essential cookies, an appropriate mechanism will allow you to accept or reject them. Your preference may be stored so that the notice does not repeatedly appear.

7. Changes to this Cookie Policy

We may revise this policy to reflect changes to the website, technology, third-party services or applicable law.
